

Free seminars | Technology and the future of work and Work and ageing

Wellington, 4 March

Auckland, 5 March

We are thrilled to invite our Auckland Wellington audiences to a free seminar by Peter Gahan, Professor of Management at the University of Melbourne.

As well as working in and advising governments, Peter has published widely on how technology is transforming the nature of work, labour market regulation and most recently, on the impact of ageing on work and the workforce.

Monday 4 March 2019

12.00 - 12:30pm: Registration and light refreshments

12:30 - 1:45pm: Seminar

Rydges Hotel, Cnr Featherston & Bunny Street, Wellington

Register for Wellington event

Tuesday 5 March 2019

12.00 - 12:30pm: Registration and light refreshments

12:30 - 1:45pm: Seminar

Rydges Auckland, 59 Federal Street, Auckland

Register for Auckland event

Disruptive technologies: the future of work and the future of work-related policy | Wellington

ICT and digital technologies have transformed, and in some cases entirely disrupted, the operations of many organisations. There is growing societal anxiety about what this all means for the future of work, job quality and economic stability. Who will be the winners and the losers in the new world(s) of work?

Everyone's future: planning for an ageing workforce | Auckland

Kiwis are entering older age better educated and in better health than ever before. Logically, as life expectancy extends, so should our working lives. But do we have the range and sensitivity of policy settings to ensure that older people who want to keep working, are able and encouraged to do so?

ANZSOG

Owned by and working for the governments of Australia and New Zealand