Te Herenga Waka—Victoria University of Wellington has been awarded an overall five-stars-plus rating in the QS Stars university rating system, one of only 17 universities worldwide to do so. The University gained a total score of 966 out of a possible 1,000 points across eight audited categories, including maximum points for the employability and inclusiveness categories. Maximum points were awarded for 25 of the more than 30 indicators, including overall student satisfaction; further study; graduate employment rate; international diversity, support, and collaborations; academic reputation; satisfaction with teaching; campus facilities; accreditations; art and cultural investment and facilities; disabled access; scholarships and bursaries; low-income outreach; and student cohort diversity.

TOHU PAETAHI PUORO

BACHELOR OF MUSIC

Music has the power to create emotions and to connect us to our past, to each other, and to the world. With a Bachelor of Music (BMus) from Te Herenga Waka—Victoria University of Wellington’s New Zealand School of Music—Te Kōkī (NZSM), you’ll build on your knowledge of music, and be elevated and inspired. Whether you want to perform, compose, teach, become a music therapist, or get involved in music research, your talent will be nurtured in a creative and collaborative environment.

Make use of the NZSM’s array of high-quality music facilities, including practice rooms, keyboard laboratories, and recording and electronic music studios. Discover the NZSM’s range of period instruments or borrow something more modern from its collection. Take the opportunity to play one of several exceptional Steinway grand pianos. If you’re a performer, you may have access to excellent performance venues on campus and in the wider Wellington region, including the University’s own Adam Concert Room. If you’re a composer, you can compose a work for the New Zealand String Quartet, or write a film score to be performed live at the Roxy Cinema by the NZSM Orchestra.

Take full advantage of studying music in creative Wellington, New Zealand’s hub of arts and culture. You will enjoy music everywhere, from the buskers of Cuba Street to renowned international performers at the Michael Fowler Centre. Imbibe Wellington’s famous nightlife, or be inspired by its beautiful beaches and bush walks.

We encourage you to get involved in performance events run by the NZSM both on campus and in public venues. Join the University’s own symphony orchestra or choir, one of the jazz big bands, a chamber group, or the jazz vocal ensemble, or be part of the opera project staged each year.

“Follow your dream to make music your career or study it to enrich your life. The New Zealand School of Music—Te Kōkī is this country’s leader in music education and offers a range of flexible opportunities for you to realise your goals.”

Professor Sarah Leggott

Dean, Wellington Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences

Note: If you want a broader degree, you could consider the Bachelor of Arts (BA) in Music (see our Bachelor of Arts publication). If you would like to expand your knowledge and skills, it is possible to take a conjoint degree combining a BMus with another approved degree.

DEGREE STRUCTURE

Our BMus takes three years of full-time study and requires you to take courses worth 360 points in total.

- ▶ A maximum of 180 points can be at 100 level.
- ▶ At least 180 points must be at 200 and 300 level.
 - ▶ Of the 180 points, at least 75 points must be from 300-level courses in Composition, Music Studies, or Performance.

You'll need to complete the requirements for at least one major. A major is the main subject you'll focus on in your degree. Each subject area has specific courses you need to take to meet the requirements of the major.

In your first year, you're likely to take at least six courses. Most, or all, of these will be core courses you'll need for your major.

In the second year of your degree, you're likely to take a minimum of six courses. In this year, there are fewer core courses and you'll have more choice to follow your particular interests or career aspirations.

In the third year, you'll study primarily 300-level courses but are likely to take two or three other electives from courses at 200 or 300 level.

Depending on your degree, you may be able to do a:

- ▶ double major—specialise in two subjects in your degree
- ▶ minor—specialise in another BMus subject (Composition, Music Technology, Performance, Popular Music Studies) without doing as many courses as for a major
- ▶ conjoint degree—this intense programme lets you complete two degrees more quickly, usually in four years, by requiring you to do fewer courses.

WHERE CAN YOUR DEGREE TAKE YOU?

After graduating, you might be a composer, cultural entrepreneur, musician, music teacher, music therapist, sound artist, or sound technician. You might work in the music, film, or theatre industries, or social research, communications, arts and culture administration, policy, finance, or events management.

Bachelor of Music graduates have transferable skills that are sought after by employers, including the ability to closely analyse and solve problems, work independently and collaboratively, critique their own and others' work, manage events and complex projects, and present and perform confidently. As a result, a variety of employment sectors will be open to you.

Some of our graduates achieve national and international recognition, becoming full-time performers, educators, scholars, composers, sonic artists, or audio engineers. It is also common for BMus graduates to have portfolio careers that combine various professional music roles with other work.

Music combines well with other disciplines of study and can enhance your learning in areas such as anthropology, English literature, film, history, law, marketing, mathematics, media, Māori studies, Pacific studies, physics, psychology, or software engineering.

“I came to the University’s Open Day and I fell in love with the film studios and the campus. I also love the comfortable culture of Wellington—I feel a lot more welcome here than in Auckland where I grew up.

“I came to university with pretty much no music knowledge except for a bit of experimenting, so don’t write yourself off if you haven’t explored something—if you enjoy it then give it a go and you’ll likely have a great time studying. Just make as much music as you can.

“I love the instant nature of creating music. With music, you can just sit down and start playing and create something right then. I also love being able to do everything, from playing the instruments to the technical production side.”

Graduate, Master of Fine Arts (Creative Practice)

POSTGRADUATE PATHWAYS

Go deeper into your area of musical interest and further explore music from cultural, historical, technical, creative, and performative perspectives. Postgraduate study at Te Herenga Waka—Victoria University of Wellington will help you build valuable relationships and networks with peers, university staff, and players in the professional music world.

We offer a variety of postgraduate study programmes to suit your interests, and our qualifications include Honours, Graduate Diploma, Postgraduate Diploma, Master's degrees, Artist Diploma, PhD, and Doctor of Musical Arts. You might focus on the creative side of music and study composition, sonic arts, classical or jazz performance (for example, with the Postgraduate Diploma in Music, Master of Musical Arts, Artist Diploma, and Doctor of Musical Arts), or you can concentrate on music from a more critical or academic perspective (for example, with the Bachelor of Music with Honours, Master of Music, Master of Arts, and PhD). You can also study Music as part of a Graduate Diploma in Arts or Bachelor of Arts with Honours.

In addition, we offer two specialist taught Master's degrees.

MASTER OF FINE ARTS (CREATIVE PRACTICE) IN MUSIC/SOUND

Study for an industry-focused, practical degree based at a purpose-refitted facility at the Miramar Creative Centre. You will build expertise in sound design/audio post-production or scoring for stage and screen with New Zealand's first Master's degree to specialise in these collaborative and creative areas. Make your own connections with our partners in Wellington's world-leading information technology and film industries through internships and guest lectures. Students in the Master of Fine Arts (Creative Practice) are placed in an internship with a professional composer or sound designer working in the film industry.

MASTER OF MUSIC THERAPY

Study for a highly rewarding career as a music therapist in the only postgraduate programme in Music Therapy offered in New Zealand. Learn how to use music to help the development or healing of people with emotional, intellectual, physical, or social needs. Work in small groups to problem solve and discuss theory and practice. Study the diverse evidence behind music therapy and learn from teachers who take a hands-on approach to ensure you get the necessary practical musical and clinical experience you'll need in the field.

MAKE PROFESSIONAL CONNECTIONS

Study at the NZSM and enjoy opportunities to learn from highly skilled and talented professional musicians. The NZSM maintains strong links with Wellington's music sector, and many of its teaching staff are artist-teachers who perform professionally within New Zealand's premier ensembles, including the New Zealand Symphony Orchestra, the New Zealand String Quartet, and the Rodger Fox Big Band. Our artist-teachers are committed to the development of younger musicians and composers, and their contribution to your learning offers extraordinary access to the professional world of music.

Gain performance experience by taking part in our many performance events, on campus and in public venues. The NZSM has its own symphony orchestra, two jazz big bands, and a host of smaller ensembles. Classical voice students stage a full opera every other year, and we run a choir that is open to all members of the University's community. You'll attend masterclasses and workshops given by leading international artists. You'll learn from visiting composers featured at weekly composer workshops. And you'll connect with leaders in a variety of fields of musical research at our music forum presentations.

EXPLORE OUR SUBJECTS

The BMus programme is comprehensive and inspirational and will help you become the musician you want to be. Within the BMus, you can major in a range of disciplines, including Classical Performance, Instrumental/Vocal Composition, Jazz Performance, and Sonic Arts and Music Technology. The Music Studies programme includes specialisations in Ethnomusicology, Jazz Studies, and Musicology. Minors are available in Composition, Music Technology, Performance (Jazz, Classical), and Popular Music Studies. The Instrumental/Vocal Composition major also includes a specialisation in Film Scoring.

MAJORS

Classical Performance

Follow your dream and become an accomplished classical musician. Study Classical Performance at the NZSM and begin your journey to becoming a professional soloist, ensemble performer, or music teacher. You'll have the opportunity to learn from, and work with, some of New Zealand's most acclaimed performers, teachers, and chamber musicians who perform, teach, and record internationally, including members of the New Zealand Symphony Orchestra. Choose from diverse instruments, including brass, guitar, harp, historical instruments, percussion, piano and keyboard, strings, voice, and woodwinds.

Instrumental/Vocal Composition

Gain the skills to compose fully notated works for live performance that move and excite audiences. You'll learn from renowned lecturers whose music regularly appears in concerts, festivals, and films worldwide. They'll teach you how to notate your music professionally, write for instruments idiomatically, orchestrate imaginatively, and develop your musical ideas into substantial, coherent works. You can even choose to take a specialisation in film scoring, learning from leading New Zealand film composers. You'll have many collaborative opportunities and will be invited to compose for ensembles such as the New Zealand String Quartet and NZSM Orchestra, as well as other professional ensembles that regularly visit the School.

Jazz Performance

Immerse yourself in the roots of contemporary music through jazz performance, improvisation, and research. Prepare yourself for a career as a performer or composer, and acquire the musical skills you need for the stage and the recording studio. Trace the development of jazz from early-twentieth-century New Orleans to the jazz of today, and use the knowledge to feed your creativity. You'll study with internationally recognised jazz musicians, teachers, and scholars from around the world. Focus on developing your skills on bass, brass, drums and percussion, guitar, piano and keyboards, voice, or woodwinds. You'll hone your performance techniques in one-to-one lessons and in recording projects, and you'll learn about improvisation, ensemble performance, composition, and musicianship.

Music Studies

Explore local and global worlds of music. This innovative and dynamic subject area combines critical, creative, theoretical, cultural, and historical perspectives on music and draws on research from a range of disciplines. Follow your interests or discover new ones, choosing from diverse options including Māori and Pacific music, European art music, film and popular music, and jazz. Study with internationally renowned scholars, and graduate with skills in critical thinking, listening, research, analysis, writing, and communication that will be valuable in many fields, including the music industry. Within Music Studies there are three areas you can specialise in: Ethnomusicology, Jazz Studies, and Musicology. You can also choose not to have a specialisation. Music Studies courses complement many subjects in other fields and may also be taken as part of a Music major in the Bachelor of Arts.

Sonic Arts and Music Technology

Explore the creative potential of sound and music through the medium of music technology. You'll learn how to record, mix, produce, synthesise, compose, and code in many different styles and creative contexts. Investigate a variety of media such as live electronic music, film sound/audio post-production, surround sound—and even musical robotics. Your degree will equip you with industry-standard music technology skills, through a programme that has been developed in collaboration with industry partners. You can also include other courses in your degree from areas such as computer science, design, and engineering.

MINORS

Composition

Composition is available as a minor (except to students doing an Instrumental/Vocal Composition major). You'll have the opportunity to learn from, or work with, some of New Zealand's most acclaimed composers and teachers, with streams in both classical and jazz composing and arranging.

Music Technology

Music Technology is available as a minor (except to students already doing a Sonic Arts and Music Technology major). Explore a variety of music technologies and learn the nuts and bolts of recording, mixing, audio production, electronic music, and coding for sound and music. You can learn how to record film sound and create evocative surround soundscapes, how to record and produce bands, or how to develop tools and techniques for making live electronic music. (Available only as a minor.)

Performance

Performance is available as a minor (except to students already doing a Classical Performance or Jazz Performance major). Develop your technical and musical ability, and artistic and stylistic insight, in performing instrumental or vocal repertoire. You'll have the opportunity to learn from, or work with, some of New Zealand's most acclaimed performers and teachers. Study classical, jazz, taonga puoro (traditional Māori instruments), and music of the Indonesian gamelan traditions.

Popular Music Studies

Popular Music Studies is an interdisciplinary minor taught by both the NZSM and the School of English, Film, Theatre, Media and Communication, and Art History. Explore and critically engage with local and international popular music and gain a 'big picture' understanding of the social, cultural, theoretical, historical, and political contexts of popular music. Learn about the various audiences, scenes, subcultures, and fans, as well as the new technologies and media, behind the music. Cutting across a number of genres, from rock and pop to hip-hop, electronic dance music, and global music, you'll gain a critical understanding of popular music in local and international contexts, as well as its historical and contemporary significance.

“Te Kōkī has a fantastic supportive culture, listening to student suggestions and responding to current events. The broad expertise of the lecturers and associates—from teasing out the emotional nuances of Beethoven to music therapy, cutting-edge sonic arts and technology—creates an inspiring and enriching environment. There is so much opportunity for experimentation, cross-disciplinary work, and trying new things without pressure or judgement.

“Studying and living in Wellington is great because the city is rich with arts, culture, politics, and lovely people. There are so many venues for art and music—on any given day there may be an installation at Toi Pōneke, a punk gig at Valhalla, experimental sound art at the Pyramid Club, and classical, jazz, contemporary, or electronic music spilling out of any of the buildings as you walk through town.”

ENTRY REQUIREMENTS

Depending on your choice of courses and degree, you may be expected to have a certain level of musical theory before starting your course of study, or you can take the MUSC 160 course to upskill yourself.

A Music major in a Bachelor of Arts, a Popular Music Studies minor, or Sonic Arts and Music Technology minor may be taken without having prior knowledge of music theory or passing an audition. The NZSM also offers individual courses that can be taken by interested students who do not have entry requirements.

If performance will be part of your studies, you will also need to pass an audition as part of the application process. For Classical Performance, the standard required is around the equivalent of Grade 8 in ABRSM, TCL, NZMEB, or AMEB exams by the time you audition. For Jazz Performance, you'll need to show technical and musical competence in a jazz style on your instrument or voice. Auditions are held throughout the year, principally from August to October.
