Trimester 1 2007

COURSE OUTLINE

Lecturer: Toby Daglish, RH309, phone 463-5451, email: toby.daglish@vuw.ac.nz

Lecture times: Fri: 9:30-11:20, RWW128

Course Objectives

This course develops the tools required to hedge and price derivative securities trading on a variety of underlying securities. The course aims to provide students with an understanding of the theory required to price a range of securities, as well as the numerical tools to handle real world problems. By the conclusion, students should have not only a solid toolset of derivative pricing techniques, but should also be able to easily grasp other techniques they might encounter in the workforce. Individuals who are skilled at analysing derivatives are in great demand in the financial community, and can command commensurately high salaries.

Readings

Readings will be taken from a variety of sources. Probably the most used reference on this material is :

- J. Hull, "Options, Futures and Other Derivatives", Prentice Hall, 6th edition. [H]

However, for some of the topics, we will find the following books useful:

- M. Baxter and A. Rennie, "Financial Calculus: An introduction to derivative pricing", Cambridge, First edition. [BR]
- P. Wilmott, S. Howison and J. Dewynne, "The Mathematics of Financial Derivatives: A Student Introduction", Cambridge, First edition. [WHD]
- P. Schonbucher, "Credit derivatives pricing models: Models, Pricing and Implementation", Wiley, First edition. [S]

Assessment Requirements

Your course mark will be a weighted average, made up as follows:

Assignment 1:	5%	due March 16.
Assignment 2:	5%	due March 30.
Midterm exam:	35%	on April 27 (during regular class time).
Live case:	15%	due May 18.
Assignment 3:	5%	due June 1.
Final exam:	35%	two hours, date will be scheduled during the university examination period (4 June – 1 July 2007).

The assignments will contain problems similar to those which will be found in the exam, while the live case will allow you to use some of the tools from the course to tackle a realistic options pricing problem using actual market data.

Expected workload

Expected workload for this course is 150 hours.
