

School of Economics and Finance

FINA 306 FINANCIAL ECONOMICS

Trimester 2, 2016

COURSE OUTLINE

Prescription

This course bridges the gap between undergraduate and honours-level study in economics and finance. It reinforces and extends the theoretical basis of decision making as it applies to asset pricing and corporate finance. It is intended for students who have an interest in pursuing honours-level study in economics and finance at VUW.

Course Learning Objectives

By the end of this course, students should be able to:

1. Derive theoretical models of the determination of asset prices from utility maximizing behavior;
2. Explain and apply economic models of individual choice in a static world with uncertainty;
3. Explain and apply economic models of equilibrium goods and asset markets in a static world;
4. Explain and use economic models of equilibrium of goods and asset markets in a multi-period world; and
5. Explain and analyze the characteristics and implications of incomplete markets.

Course Content

The primary aim of FINA 306 is to bridge the gap between undergraduate and honours-level study in economics and finance. It is intended for students who have an interest in pursuing honours-level study in economics and finance at VUW, which is why the prerequisites include a grade of B or better in ECON 201 (Microeconomics).

The course reflects the philosophy that there is an intimate connection between economics and finance. These subjects use the same tools of analysis and assume the same conceptual basis for individual behaviour and social benefit. In the presence of uncertainty and intertemporal decision-making, economics and finance become virtually one subject.

Compared to the other 300-level papers, there will be a greater focus on underlying theoretical concepts and rather less on problem solving. The course will not be especially mathematically demanding. However, the material will be presented in a way that is much more abstract than many students will have seen before.
