Preparing Teachers for Cultural and Linguistic Diversity in Cross-National Contexts

Professor Arnetha F. Ball
(Stanford Graduate School of Education)
Director, Program in African & African American Studies

At a time of major change in educational sectors worldwide, there also exists unique opportunities for the exchange of ideas and for fostering collaboration to address one of the most important issues facing education today: preparing a teaching force for cultural and linguistic diversity in twenty-first century classrooms. This talk addresses concerns related to the current state of teacher education across national boundaries and discusses persisting challenges facing teacher education in diverse communities.

Tuesday 26 March 2013: 5–6pm
Venue: HMLT105, Hugh McKenzie Lecture Theatre, Kelburn Campus

Please RSVP to pam.ritchie@vuw.ac.nz by 22 March.