Class Times and Room Numbers

Lectures: Friday 12.00 pm – 1.50 pm KK103

Course Objectives

The course aims to equip students with an appreciation of the evolution of the state-economy relationship, enable them to understand and critique the role of the state in managing the economy, and to understand to what extent states can pursue their public policy goals in the era of globalisation.

The course also aims to develop students' ability to think critically, to develop their research and analysis skills, and to achieve a high level of ability in written presentation. The seminar presentations provide opportunities for students to critically engage with a body of academic knowledge, to engage intellectually with fellow students and to present material in an accessible and informative manner. The research essays enable students to demonstrate ability in independent research, to gain in-depth knowledge of particular aspects of the course material, and to show skills in analysis and written presentation. The final examination allows students to display their understanding of the wider course content by applying course concepts and theories, organisation of material, and logical and coherent arguments in their answers.

Course Content

The state and the market represent two different approaches to organising human behaviour, and the relationship between them has always affected the conduct of public policy. A key theme of the course is the way in which states manage their economic development within an international context increasingly characterised by patterns of globalisation. While globalisation may help to enhance a nation's economic prosperity, it may also impose, to differing degrees, new constraints on the state's ability to pursue economic, social, and environmental objectives.

For a schedule of topics and associated readings, please see the seminar schedule below.

Expected Workload

The workload of the paper is estimated at 12 hours per week, which includes class contact hours (2 hours per week), topic familiarisation (2 hours per week), seminar preparation and associated readings (6 hours per week), and essay development (2 hours per week).

Readings and Key Texts

The suggested textbooks for the course are:

- David Held and Anthony McGrew, The Global Transformations Reader: An Introduction to the Globalization Debate, (Polity Press, Cambridge, UK, 2003).
- Christopher Pierson, The Modern State, (Routledge, London, 2004).

There is also a set of required readings for the course, the PUBL 408/POLS 436 course-book, which contains many of the assigned readings.

Other readings may be posted on Blackboard, or distributed in class from time to time.

However, you should not rely solely on the recommended texts or readings to write your research essay or prepare for the final exam. You are expected to show familiarity with the wider literature and demonstrate your ability to independently research topics by using the electronic databases, relevant journals, and library.

Assessment Requirements

The course will be assessed on a combination of: in-term work (60%); a final examination (40%).

In-term work (60%) consisting of:

- Seminar participation and two seminar presentations (20% of the final grade)
- Essay One (due Friday 6th June) – an essay of about 5000 words selected from a given list of essay topics (20% of the final grade)
- Essay Two (due 10 October) – a research essay of about 5000 words based on a topic of your choice but associated with the seminar topics (20% of the final grade)

Final exam (40%)

There will be a final three-hour, closed-book examination (40% of the final grade). Students will be required to answer three essay-type questions (worth equal marks). The exam period runs from about 20th October – 7th November 2008.

The University has a policy of reasonable accommodation of the needs of students with disabilities in examinations and other assessment procedures. Students are advised to speak to the course coordinator or disabilities liaison person in their school/department.

Penalties

The following penalties will be incurred by the late submission of work:

- No penalty for one week past the due date if accompanied by medical certificate, or other documentation
- 15 marks deducted for work submitted later than one week, but less than two weeks, past the due date, or without documentation.
- Work submitted later than two weeks past the due date will only be accepted at the discretion of the course supervisor.

Mandatory Course Requirements

In order to pass the course PUBL 408/POLS 436, students must:

- i) attend at least 75 percent of the weekly seminar presentations;
- ii) take it in turns to lead the seminar discussion of readings;
- iii) give two oral seminar presentations;
