Course delivery

HIST 427 is a seminar-taught course. Preparation prior to class meetings (reading seminar materials and considering discussion questions) and participation in seminar discussions is essential and expected.

Communication of additional information

Additional information will be announced and circulated in classes, by an email list, and advised on the Blackboard site for the course.

Course aims and objectives

The course provides an opportunity for advanced study in a burgeoning field of historical research and debate. Students will work with the secondary literature to build an understanding of the field and undertake a research project using primary sources. Students completing the course will develop a familiarity with the imperatives driving the emergence of the new field linking gender and empire; will develop critical perspectives on work in that field; will gain an understanding of the key concepts used in interpretation; and will deepen their research skills by completing a research project using primary sources.

Course content

Spanning the period from roughly the end of the 18thC and American independence through to the imperial conferences of the 1920s, the course explores the inter-related histories of gender and empire, largely as they unfolded in what became known as the British Empire. The course takes up the work which has grown out of the confluence of 'new' imperial history and perspectives of gender history. How was masculinity and femininity defined, lived out, and performed in colony and empire? How did empires come into being through the work, words and bodies of people 'in' the empire, and people 'in' colonies?

New Zealand and other settler colonies will provide the major focus for the course, but will also feature alongside non-settler colonies and the metropolitan world of late 18thC to early 20thC Britain and Ireland. Seminars and course work will be arranged by topic and theme. Topics will traverse the imperial world in time and space, and will include the histories of masculinities; the enterprise of missions and rival claims of conscience and faith; intermarriage; colonial travellers to the imperial metropole, and imperial travellers to the colonial world; sport, hunting and game in the making of empire; commodities and commerce in an imperial circuit; colonial and imperial imposters; competing forms of law; statuary and architecture in the making of imperial space; the writing ties of empire; gender and the imagining of empire, colony and metropole.

There will be considerable scope to determine particular areas of interest within the broad themes and to conduct research using primary sources available in the rich repositories of the Alexander Turnbull and National Libraries, Parliamentary Library, and Archives New Zealand, as well as in valuable digital collections held by the university library, notably Empire On-line, and Defining Gender. Broad topic areas from which the final seminar programme and detailed student research work will be developed are listed below:

Imperial space

Imperial and colonial masculinities

Imperial and colonial femininities

Missions, conscience and faith

The empire at home

Intermarriage & inter racial intimacies

Colonial travellers to the metropole

Metropolitan travellers to the colonies

Sport, hunting and game in the making of empire

Plants, animals and the imperial/colonial trade in flora and fauna

Commodities and commerce in an imperial circuit

Colonial and imperial imposters

Health and disease

Status in the empire – a world of opportunity?

Law in the empire – transmissions and cross currents

Statuary and architecture in the making of imperial space

The writing ties of empire

Gender and the imagining of empire, colony and metropole

Performing empire – drama, ceremony, pomp and ritual

Learning objectives

Students in HIST 427 will have the opportunity to:

- i) develop a detailed knowledge of an historical period from a thematic perspective;
- ii) develop knowledge of and a critical approach to current questions and debate in the field of the history of gender and empire;
- iii) to engage in considered and informed discussion with colleagues in seminar meetings, and to make a formal presentation to the HIST 427 seminar, thereby developing skills in oral presentation (seminar paper);
- iv) to demonstrate and develop skills in written presentation of historical ideas and argument, including the application of conventions of scholarly study of history (book review, two essays);
- v) to undertake a major piece of primary source research, and to develop knowledge, abilities and discrimination in the use of primary and secondary sources in a variety of media.

Expected workload

The Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences suggests that student should spend an average of 12 hours per week for a full year, 400-level course.

Readings

There is no single text or book of readings for HIST 427. Readings will be distributed for seminars throughout the year.

Assessment and Assessment requirements

HIST 427 is a fully internally assessed course, i.e. there is no final examination. As with all History Honours papers, final results are subject to external assessment.

Assessment is as follows:

Book review, 25%, 1500 words, due Thursday 1 April.

First essay, 35%, 3,500 words, due Friday 28 May.

Research essay, 40%, 4,500 words, due Friday 15 October.

All students will also be expected to present one major seminar. The seminar will be related to the subject of one of the major essays.

Further information about these assignments will be circulated.

Relationship between assessment and course objectives:

The Book Review and first Essay are designed to develop critical understanding of key concepts and at least one major topic area in the field of gender and empire. They require discrimination in reading and distillation in the articulation of ideas and argument.

The Research essay is designed to provide an opportunity to design a research project using primary sources – i.e., requiring a subject and line of enquiry to be determined, pertinent sources to be identified, read and interpreted, and conclusions brought together in a cogent piece of historical writing.

In all pieces of work creative and critical skills used by historians are to be fostered.

Marking criteria

Book review: depth of understanding of work under review; ability to relate work to wider field; succinctness and originality in expression.

First essay: breadth and discrimination in reading of relevant secondary sources; soundness and originality in argument; clarity in expression; application of conventions of historical scholarship.

Research essay: creativity and clarity in formulation of research project; identification of relevant primary sources and effective use of such sources; ability to blend primary and secondary sources in answering an historical question or addressing an historical problem; clarity in expression; application of conventions of historical scholarship.

Penalties

Students will be penalised for late submission of essays—a deduction of 5% per day up to a maximum of 5 working days. Work that is more than 5 working days late can be accepted for mandatory course requirements but will not be marked. However, penalties may be waived if there are valid grounds, e.g., illness (presentation of a medical certificate will be necessary) or similar other contingencies. In such cases, prior notice will be necessary, unless exceptional circumstances make this impossible. You must complete an extension form, available from the History Office (Old Kirk Room 405), and agree to a new due date with your lecturer. A photocopy of the extension form (approved and signed by the lecturer) must be submitted with the essay.

Mandatory course requirements

To gain a pass in this course each student must:

- a) Submit the written work specified for this course, on or by the specified dates (subject to such provisions as are stated for late submission of work)
- b) Attend at least 14 seminars. It is expected that all students will attend all seminars.

NB: A student who has obtained an overall mark of 50% or more, but failed to satisfy a mandatory requirement for a course, will receive a K grade for that course, while a course mark less than 50% will result in the appropriate fail grade (D, E or F).

The Final date for any written work in HIST 427 in 2010 is 22 October 2010.

Academic Integrity and Plagiarism

Academic integrity means that university staff and students, in their teaching and learning are expected to treat others honestly, fairly and with respect at all times. It is not acceptable to mistreat academic, intellectual or creative work that has been done by other people by representing it as your own original work.

Academic integrity is important because it is the core value on which the University's learning, teaching and research activities are based. Victoria University's reputation for academic integrity adds value to your qualification.

The University defines plagiarism as presenting someone else's work as if it were your own, whether you mean to or not. 'Someone else's work' means anything that is not your own idea. Even if it is presented in your own style, you must acknowledge your sources fully and appropriately. This includes:

- Material from books, journals or any other printed source
- The work of other students or staff
- Information from the internet
- Software programs and other electronic material
- Designs and ideas
- The organisation or structuring of any such material

Find out more about plagiarism, how to avoid it and penalties, on the University's website:
<http://www.victoria.ac.nz/home/study/plagiarism.aspx>

GENERAL UNIVERSITY POLICIES AND STATUTES

Students should familiarise themselves with the University's policies and statutes, particularly the Assessment Statute, the Personal Courses of Study Statute, the Statute on Student Conduct and any statutes relating to the particular qualifications being studied; see the Victoria University Calendar or go to the Academic Policy and Student Policy sections on:
