Teaching/learning summary

The course is delivered over 12 weeks of lectures and 11 weeks of tutorials. Both tutorials and lectures are essential aspects of the course and the primary means in which the course content is delivered.

Communication of additional information

This course uses Blackboard and presumes that all enrolled students have valid myvuw.ac.nz addresses. Please check that this account is active and you have organised email forwarding. Additional information and any changes to the timetable or lecture and seminar programme will be advised by email, announced in lectures, and posted on the East Asian Politics Blackboard site.

Course prescription

This course introduces students to politics and government in East Asia. It focuses on China, Japan, Korea and Taiwan, and examines the political history and culture, major institutions and policy processes, economic and social development, and foreign policies of these countries.

Learning objectives

Students who pass this course should:

1. have developed a general knowledge of the overall patterns and dynamics of East Asian politics;
2. have a good understanding of government and politics in at least one of the East Asian countries;
3. be familiar with the basic concepts and issues covered in this course;
4. have acquired basic skills in studying East Asian politics (locating information, choosing a topic, discussing an issue, etc.); and
5. be able to write an academic essay on a relevant topic in East Asian Politics.

Graduate attributes

As with all Political Science and International Relations courses, learning objectives of this course contribute to the attainment of specific attributes in the areas of logical and critical thinking, conceptual analysis and rational and ethical decision-making. For more details please consult our website <http://www.victoria.ac.nz/hppi/about/overview-of-the-school/psir-overview#grad-attributes>

Expected workload

In accordance with Faculty Guidelines, this course has been constructed on the assumption that students will devote 200 hours to East Asian Politics throughout the trimester. This includes weekly attendance at lectures, and tutorials, completion of all set weekly readings and research and writing for set assessment tasks.

Readings

Set texts:

Xiaoming Huang, 2009. Politics in Pacific Asia. London and New York: Palgrave.

See schedule of class (final section of this outline) for set readings for each week. Books are available at the library, journal articles via the library databases and government reports are available online. Details on Blackboard.

All undergraduate textbooks and student notes will be sold from the Memorial Theatre Foyer from 11 February to 15 March 2013, while postgraduate textbooks and student notes will be available from vicbooks' new store, Ground Floor Easterfield Building, Kelburn Parade. After week two of the trimester all undergraduate textbooks and student notes will be sold from vicbooks, Easterfield Building.

Customers can order textbooks and student notes online at www.vicbooks.co.nz or can email an order or enquiry to enquiries@vicbooks.co.nz. Books can be couriered to customers or they can be picked up from nominated collection points at each campus. Customers will be contacted when they are available.

Opening hours are 8.00 am – 6.00 pm, Monday – Friday during term time (closing at 5.00 pm in the holidays). Phone: 463 5515.

Assessment requirements

1. Reading Report	due 26 March	20% of final grade
2. First In-Class Test	on 16 April	20% of final grade
3. Research Essay	due 20 May	40% of final grade
4. Second In-Class Test	on 4 June	20% of final grade

Reading report

Due 26th of March; 20% of final grade; 1000 word limit.

This assignment asks you to write a report on one of the readings listed in the schedule of class (final section of this outline) other than the set text (Huang 2009). The reading report should include the following:

- a. A concise summary of the article; its main argument, and how the argument is made.
- b. A critique of the article in the context of the scholarly discussion or debate on the issue. This will require research.
- c. A discussion of how this article helps you to understand East Asian politics.

The report gives you the opportunity to expand your knowledge of the literature and to demonstrate your ability to critically assess a scholarly work in the field.

First in-Class Test

On 26 April; 20% of final grade; 50 minute closed book.

The first in-class test will cover material from the readings, lectures and tutorials of the first six weeks of the course. The test will have two parts:

Part A asks you to briefly define and discuss some key terms and concepts covered in the course (choose 4 out of 6).

In Part B, you are asked to write a short essay on a question from a list of five. Questions are based on the study questions at the end of the chapters of the course text and the material covered in lectures.

This in-class test assesses your knowledge of East Asian politics, expected to be gained from the lectures, discussions and readings, and the ability to organise thoughts and ideas in response to a question or problem.

Research Essay

Due 20 May; 40% of final grade; 2500 word limit.

This assignment asks you to write an essay on one of the following study questions. If you would like to deviate from one of these questions please email me or come to see me to discuss. The focus of the research essay is on the general pattern across East Asian countries (China, Japan, Korea and Taiwan) on the chosen question/topic. A comparative analysis is required to explain similarities and differences between at least two countries.

Research Essay Questions:

1. Was colonial rule a positive or negative force for modern political development in East Asia? (I suggest China and Korea)
2. How can we explain political liberalization and democratic transition in some East Asian states in the post-cold war era?
3. Is 'popular will' the primary means of maintaining state legitimacy in East Asia?
4. How successful have reforms to decentralize government authority been in East Asia?
5. How and why is law made differently in China and Japan?
6. Have East Asian governments shifted from 'rule by law' to 'rule of law'?
7. How can we understand the problem of corruption in East Asia? Is it a political development, institutional or cultural challenge?
8. Bureaucrats in East Asia historically assumed a high position in society. Does this impact the relationship between government, society and the bureaucracy?
9. How can we explain the East Asian economic miracle?
10. Is there an Asian model of development?
11. Why and how do catch-all and corporatist parties differ?
12. Has electoral reform, such as the introduction of proportional representation in Japan or village elections in China, strengthened democracy in East Asia?
13. Is a state-centric theory, a society-centric theory or a state in society theory the best explanation of state-society relations in East Asia?
14. How can we conceptualise civil society in East Asia?
15. Based on evidence from East Asia, does 'democracy result from increasing demands of the middle class expanding along with economic and social development'?
16. How has capitalism spread in East Asia?
17. Have new media technologies such as Sina Weibo or Facebook fundamentally changed the relationship between state and society in pluralist and non-pluralist states in East Asia?
18. What is modern state-building? Why do some scholars argue 'traditional forces' are complicating the establishment of 'a polity with equal citizenship and a public authority capable of effective and efficient governance of mass society on behalf of its citizens' in East Asia?
19. What is modernity? Is there an East Asian modernity?
20. Do East Asian governments approach regional integration in the same way? Why?
21. Do development trends in East Asia suggest this will be an 'Asian Century'?

This assignment allows you to demonstrate your ability to use comparative skills to examine general patterns in East Asian politics.

Second in-Class Test

On 4 June; 20% of final grade; 50 minute closed book.

The second in-class test will cover material from the readings, lectures and tutorials of the last six weeks of the course. The test will have two parts:

Part A asks you to briefly define and discuss some key terms and concepts covered in the course (choose 4 out of 6).

In Part B, you are asked to write a short essay on a question from a list of five. Questions are based on the study questions at the end of the chapters of the course text and the material covered in lectures.

This in-class test assesses your knowledge of East Asian politics, expected to be gained from the lectures, discussions and readings, and the ability to organise thoughts and ideas in response to a question or problem.

Penalties

Students will be penalised for late submission of assignments – a deduction of 5% for the first day late, and 2% per day thereafter, up to a maximum of 8 days. Work that is more than 10 weekdays late can be accepted for mandatory course requirements but may not be marked. Penalties may be waived if there are valid grounds (for example, illness [presentation of a medical certificate will be necessary] or similar other contingencies). In all such cases, prior information will be necessary.

Mandatory course requirements

To gain a pass in this course each student must:

- Submit the reading report and research essay, on or by the specified dates (subject to such provisions as are stated for late submission of work);
- Sit the first and second in-class tests;
- Attend 8 of the 11 tutorials.

Submission of work

All written work must be submitted in hard copy either to the course coordinator in lecture or placed in my pigeon hole outside the PSIR programme office on the fifth floor of the Murphy building. This pigeon hole will be cleared at 4.30pm every day. Work placed in the pigeon hole after 4.30pm will be considered submitted for the following day. All assignments must have a Programme cover sheet attached.

The Programme's policy requires that students also submit an electronic copy along with the hardcopy. For this course, please email to me an electronic copy of your work on the same due date for your hardcopy submission. The subject line of your email submission should be "203-2013 First Assignment." The email copy however does not constitute a formal submission and I will not mark an email submission only.

The course expects students to submit their assignments on time. Requests for extensions should be made with the lecturer in person with proper documentation before the due date. Extensions are normally given only to those with a medical certificate, or other evidence of forces beyond your control.

Return of marked course work

Essays and tests will be returned at times to be advised. If students fail to attend these times, they may collect their essay from the PSIR Office on the Fifth Floor of the Murphy Building between the hours of 2.00 and 3.00 pm from Monday to Friday and must show their Student ID card before collection.

Class representative

A class representative will be elected in the first week, and that person's name and contact details will be available to VUWSA, the Course Coordinator and the class. The class representative provides a communication channel to liaise with the Course Coordinator on behalf of students.

Academic integrity and plagiarism

Academic integrity means that university staff and students, in their teaching and learning are expected to treat others honestly, fairly and with respect at all times. It is not acceptable to mistreat academic, intellectual or creative work that has been done by other people by representing it as your own original work.

Academic integrity is important because it is the core value on which the University's learning, teaching and research activities are based. Victoria University's reputation for academic integrity adds value to your qualification.

The University defines plagiarism as presenting someone else's work as if it were your own, whether you mean to or not. 'Someone else's work' means anything that is not your own idea. Even if it is presented in your own style, you must acknowledge your sources fully and appropriately. This includes:

- Material from books, journals or any other printed source
- The work of other students or staff
- Information from the internet
- Software programs and other electronic material
- Designs and ideas
- The organisation or structuring of any such material

Find out more about plagiarism, how to avoid it and penalties, on the University's website:

<http://www.victoria.ac.nz/home/study/plagiarism>

Use of Turnitin

Student work provided for assessment in this course may be checked for academic integrity by the electronic search engine <http://www.turnitin.com>. Turnitin is an online plagiarism prevention tool which compares submitted work with a very large database of existing material. At the discretion of the Head of School, handwritten work may be copy-typed by the School and subject to checking by Turnitin. Turnitin will retain a copy of submitted material on behalf of the University for detection of future plagiarism, but access to the full text of submissions is not made available to any other party.
