Wednesday 4.10pm – 5pm in 24KP101

Some of the lecture slots will be used for lab classes in CyberCommons (KK218). See schedule.

Classes above are jointly taught with LING 323. Additional sessions will be organised for Honours students by mutual agreement.

One tutorial per week. Tutorials begin in the second week (beginning 9th March). Because the majority of the tutorial times have been timetabled on Mondays there will be no tutorials in the weeks beginning 27 April and 1 June, since those Mondays are public holidays.

Tutorial lists will be posted on Blackboard and on the Linguistics Undergraduate Notice Board during the first week of the trimester. Check the lists before that date.

Do not miss your first tutorial. You may not change tutorials without consulting the course coordinator. Tutorials form an essential part of all Linguistics courses. It is expected that students will attend all tutorials.

Further information relevant to this course will be posted on its Blackboard site (see http://blackboard.vuw.ac.nz), which you can access using your Student Computing Service ID.

Prescription

This course explores the psychological processes involved in producing and understanding language and the nature of mentally represented knowledge associated with language. It also familiarises students with the research methodologies used to investigate such processes and knowledge.

Course content (see the attached lecture schedule for more detailed information)

weeks 1-4   introduction & language production weeks 5-8   perception and word recognition weeks 8-10   sentence processing week 11   discourse and conversation week 12   architecture of the language system

Course learning objectives (CLOs)

The course aims to help students better understand the psychological processes involved in language production and comprehension, and the relationship of linguistic theory to psycholinguistic experiment and theory.
Students who pass this course should be able to:

1. understand the psychological processes involved in language production and comprehension
2. understand claims made about the mental representation of language
3. apply their understanding under 1. & 2. to the analysis of data
4. evaluate the role of linguistic theory in the psychological examination of language use
5. evaluate theoretical positions in psycholinguistic research
6. understand methodologies appropriate to psycholinguistic research
7. apply analytical tools in completing practical exercises
8. design an investigation into an aspect of psycholinguistics and set out the findings of such an investigation in an appropriate format.

Teaching format

The content of LING 423 Psycholinguistics is delivered through a combination of lectures, computer laboratory sessions, and tutorials, as well as through students' own reading. The computer lab sessions introduce students to techniques used in psycholinguistic research. Usually, students will participate in demo versions of experiments in these sessions, and the results of these experiments are discussed in subsequent tutorials. It is expected that all students will participate in all classes.

Mandatory course requirements

In addition to achieving an overall pass mark of 50%, students must:

1. hand in the practical exercises and assignment by the specified dates (taking into account any extension that has been granted), having made a satisfactory attempt at each assessment component. "Satisfactory" means that where a piece of work has not reached a C- standard, it must nevertheless reflect the fact that the assessment has been taken seriously and that a reasonable amount of effort has been devoted to completing it.
2. achieve a standard of 40% or better in the take-home test.

Workload

In line with University recommendations, it is expected that in order to make satisfactory progress students should devote 300 hours to this course over the duration of the trimester, including the mid-trimester break, study week and exam period. This averages to about 18 hours per week. This time includes attendance at classes (between 2 and 4 hours, depending on public holidays), as well as preparation for classes, background reading, practical work, and preparation for assignments and the examination. Some students will find they need to do more than this, and students aiming for high grades will almost certainly need to do more.

Assessment

	Assessment items and workload per item	Word count	%	CLO(s)	Due date
1	Practical exercise 1	500	10%	1-7	27 Mar
2	Practical exercise 2	500	10%	1-7	20 Apr
3	Practical exercise 3	500	10%	1-7	15 May
3	Research essay	4000	40%	1-8	3 June
4	Take-home test (9am – 5pm, open-book)	3000	30%	1-6	on a day to be agreed, between 15 and 26 June

The practical exercises will involve analysis of language data of relevance to psycholinguistics. The area of the research essay will be selected by the student under guidance from the course coordinator.

You are advised to think about each of piece of assessment well in advance, as some topics involve a small amount of data collection, for which you will need to be prepared. This may mean starting to think about each one before the previous piece of work has been submitted and returned.

Note that you must achieve a mark of at least 40% in the take-home test in order to pass this course.

The University has a policy of reasonable accommodation of the needs of students with disabilities in examinations and other assessment procedures.

Submission and return of work

All assessment items should be submitted in electronic format (via email or on a USB device) to the course coordinator before the due date and time. Your answers to the practical exercises and your assignments should be typed, with large enough margins, including top and bottom margins, for comments to be added. Phonetic fonts, if you need to use them, can be downloaded from the web – the Doulos SIL font is recommended (available from http://scripts.sil.org/doulossilfont).

Every effort will be made to return your work within one week of the submission date, usually in the lecture on the relevant day.

Extensions and penalties

Extensions

Extensions (with no penalty) will be considered by the course coordinator on the grounds of exceptional personal circumstances as set out in Section 8 of the Assessment Handbook 2014. Students seeking extensions should do so as early as possible, and if an extension is granted they will be issued with a note to that effect which must be stapled to the front of their assessment submission. If the extension is to a date beyond the day on which the assessment item is due to be returned to the class, then the course coordinator may require that you carry out an alternative assessment task.

Penalties

In line with school policy, assignments handed in after the due date will receive a considerably reduced grade unless accompanied by a medical certificate or other evidence of exceptional circumstances. Information on penalty arrangements will be included with the detailed instructions for each assignment.
