PRESCRIPTION

A study of the diverse theatrical practices of theatre in Aotearoa New Zealand from the pre-colonial era to the present. There will be a core focus on how changing relationships between tangata whenua and settler cultures have been expressed through performance and playwriting. Topics include theatre spaces, realism, comedy, devising, feminism, Pasifika theatre and dance.

COURSE CONTENT

This course explores the evolution of theatre and performance in New Zealand; charting work from early Tangata Whenua to contemporary Maori work, through the introduction of European dramaturgies and the development of a distinct Pakeha voices, to vibrant theatre from diasporic communities, and innovative global exports. Throughout the course we identify ways that New Zealand's theatrical 'canon' engages with key themes of classical and modern drama from Europe and the United States: Love, War, Family, Heritage, Journeys, Sex and Death. Traversing the Shakespearean genres of Comedy, Tragedy, History and the Pastoral/Romantic, the course will focus on what makes our theatre both locally relevant and globally trailblazing. Lectures and Seminars will incorporate a variety of activities and material, including active learning exercises, viewing video material, discussion and guest lecturers. Your active presence will be
