Prescription

This course will examine kinship as viewed by anthropologists. It is a subject that was seen as essential, then largely neglected, and now is increasingly seen as important to our understanding of human society and culture.

Course learning objectives (CLOs)

Students who pass this course should be able to:

1. Identify and demonstrate the importance of kinship in the societies studied by anthropologists.
2. Critically analyse the relationship between culture and kinship, and
3. Describe and evaluate anthropological theories of kinship.

Teaching format

This course will use lectures (two per week) and tutorials (nine in total), supplemented by Blackboard.

Mandatory course requirements

In addition to achieving an overall pass mark of 50%, students must:

1. attend at minimum 7 of the 9 tutorials so they will have the opportunity to prepare and ask questions about the assignments, develop communication skills, and demonstrate the achievement of all CLOs.
2. submit a genuine attempt at the two assignments to ensure they can demonstrate they have a functional understanding of the key ideas associated with CLOs 2-3.
3. sit the final exam in order to demonstrate the achievement of all CLOs.

Any student who is concerned that they have been (or might be) unable to meet any of the MCRs because of exceptional personal circumstances, should contact the course coordinator as soon as possible.

Workload

In line with university guidelines you should devote 13 hours per week to this course; this includes 2 lecture hours and 1 hour of tutorial time. The other 10 hours will be made up by reading and essay preparation and writing. The expectations are that students will work 10 hours per point, therefore a 20-point course equates to 200 hours over the trimester. This includes scheduled contact time, individual or group study, and work on assessment tasks.

Assessment

All work is date-stamped, recorded and then handed to the appropriate markers.

Please note that you might be asked for written justification, e.g., a medical certificate, death notice, or letter from a counsellor.
