NEW ZEALAND
WORDS

Elegant, expert and utterly up-to-date,
this accessible yet definitive little book contains over 1,500 samples from
New Zealand's distinctive vocabulary.

For the first time since Orsman's 1997 Dictionary of New Zealand English here are fresh New Zealandisms and examples of their use, from both historical and contemporary sources and all areas of New Zealand life.

Elegant, expert and utterly up-to-date, the Book of New Zealand Words contains an informed and engaging introduction offering real insight into the development of New Zealand English, the distinctive influence of the Māori language, and the connections between society, the media and the words we use. The author explores where we really get our words – from politics, food, sports and recreation to common and colloquial sources, and more.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Dr Dianne Bardsley is Director of the New Zealand Dictionary Centre at Victoria University of Wellington, and lecturer in the School of Linguistics and Applied Languages. A noted lexicographer, she is the author of several books and a major contributor to the New Zealand Oxford Dictionary (2005) and the New Partridge Dictionary of Slang (9th edition). She is co-writer of the book Questions of Language (2011) and the fortnightly column 'Watch Your Language' in Wellington's Dominion Post.
