The New Zealand Journal of Public and International Law is a fully refereed journal published by the New Zealand Centre for Public Law at the Faculty of Law, Victoria University of Wellington. The Journal was established in 2003 as a forum for public and international legal scholarship. It is available in hard copy by subscription and is also available on the HeinOnline, Westlaw, Informit and EBSCO electronic databases.

NZJPIL welcomes the submission of articles, short essays and comments on current issues, and book reviews. Manuscripts and books for review should be sent to the address below. Manuscripts must be typed and accompanied by an electronic version in Microsoft Word or rich text format, and should include an abstract and a short statement of the author’s current affiliations and any other relevant personal details. Manuscripts should generally not exceed 12,000 words. Shorter notes and comments are also welcome. Authors should see earlier issues of NZJPIL for indications as to style; for specific guidance, see the New Zealand Law Style Guide (2nd ed, 2011). Submissions whose content has been or will be published elsewhere will not be considered for publication. The Journal cannot return manuscripts.

Regular submissions are subject to a double-blind peer review process. In addition, the Journal occasionally publishes addresses and essays by significant public office holders. These are subject to a less formal review process.

Contributions to NZJPIL express the views of their authors and not the views of the Editorial Committee or the New Zealand Centre for Public Law. All enquiries concerning reproduction of the Journal or its contents should be sent to the Student Editor.

Annual subscription rates are NZ$100 (New Zealand) and NZ$130 (overseas). Back issues are available on request. To order in North America contact:

The New Zealand Centre for Public Law was established in 1996 by the Victoria University of Wellington Council with the funding assistance of the VUW Foundation. Its aims are to stimulate awareness of and interest in public law issues, to provide a forum for discussion of these issues and to foster and promote research in public law. To these ends, the Centre organises a year-round programme of conferences, public seminars and lectures, workshops, distinguished visitors and research projects. It also publishes a series of occasional papers.

FOREWORD

Tony Angelo* and Dean Knight

This is the second issue of the New Zealand Journal of Public and International Law for 2015. Following our established pattern, this general issue includes a number of articles across a range of topics, complementing the more specific conference or topic oriented issue which appears as part one of the volume.

Nevertheless the articles in this issue have a theme, and that is a theme relating to rights at the broadest level. Two of the articles address rights for smaller or less fortunate groups in society and indicate ways in which the international community and New Zealand in particular can better assist those with disabilities. The third and more general of the articles concerns the rights of all members of the New Zealand community in relation to the operation of local authorities - a right that might, in a most general sense, be seen as one of good governance at a subnational level in institutions with close relationships with local communities.

Lida Ayoubi’s article looks at copyright and access for the visually impaired to copyright protected material, in the context of the Marrakesh Treaty of 2013. The article demonstrates the compatibility of the Marrakesh Treaty provisions with the basic international copyright law instruments. She concludes with an appeal to the international community to adopt the Marrakesh Treaty and then to implement appropriate measures in the interests of the visually impaired.

The second article concerns New Zealand’s ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and, in particular, New Zealand’s implementation of the Convention since it came into force in 2008. In this article, Sylvia Bell, Judy McGregor and Margaret Wilson argue that, despite good intentions, New Zealand’s approach is not aligned with the Convention and indeed fails to honour its commitment to the disability community.

In the final article, Laura Hardcastle reviews the regimes allowing ministerial intervention in subnational institutions and argues in favour of greater democratic interplay in the exercise of ministerial powers. She proposes a set of principles which would inform the use of ministerial intervention powers, preferably before the exercise of the powers, or provide a basis upon which post-exercise judicial review may take place.
